Welcome to Faith Alliance!

From Pastor Tom's Desk...

"Search me, O God, and know my heart; test me and know my anxious thoughts. See if there is any offensive say in me, and lead me in the way everlasting." (Psalm 139: 23-24)

I'm sure you typically can distinguish an apology that is sincere from one that is not. Often when people "apologize," we have the sense that they're just saying the right thing, but they don't really mean it. There is no regret for the sin or injustice involved in their action.

Sometimes we approach God with a similar cavalier attitude about our sin. We assume that if we casually name our sins, God will forgive us. The word "confess" literally means "to agree." So when we "confess our sin," we are agreeing with God that we have fallen short of His standard. From a Biblical perspective, confession implies repentance. We confess so that we can (1) be forgiven, (2) turn from our sin by the power of the Holy Spirit. Particularly, when we "confess" without the intention of turning from our sin, we have not repented, and consequently forgiveness is not activated in our lives.

Some sins are obvious, aren't they? When I blow up at my wife or kids, it's pretty obvious that I have sinned. However, when I harbor resentment or become proud, my sin is less obvious. For those times, I need the Holy Spirit to help me see my sin. We are all pretty good at the art of denial. If we take confession seriously, we will need to ask the Holy Spirit to show us our sin so that we can confess it and turn from it.

This brings us to David's prayer in Psalm 139. "Search me, O God," he prayed, "and know my heart." Because of my denial, I don't always recognize my own sin. The process of confession invites the Holy Spirit to show us what He sees in us. There may be sins that are hidden from our consciousness that we won't even think about unless the Spirit reveals them to us. So confession is not just listing the obvious sins in our lives; it is, instead, asking the Spirit to show us where we need to be transformed.

The process of transformation, therefore, begins with confession. This amounts to asking God to show us our need, so we can humble ourselves before Him, turn from our sin, and invite his power to transform (sanctify) us. Confession is genuinely admitting our need for the Spirit's transforming power to be active in our lives.

The Christian life may be described as a "confessional" life. I sometimes say that Christians are predisposed to repentance. When we initially repent, we are in essence saying the Jesus, "I don't ever want to sin again." However, we all fall short of that goal. When the Spirit reveals our sin to us, since we have already settled the basic issue of obedience, we generally come quickly to a state of repentance. Some sins have a greater hold on us, and so we might struggle a bit more, but as Christians we are never content with sin. Confession says: "I don't want to continue in sin."

The best way to deal with sin is to be honest with God. After all, he already knows! Express your dependency upon Him, and you'll discover a new power for holy living.

Grace and peace,
Pastor Tom
